The Impact of Subsidized Food Schemes on Women's Time Spent on Cooking

Under the guidance of Professor Ashwini Deshpande (Head of Department, Economics, Ashoka University)

- Analyzing the effects of subsidized food schemes on women's time spent cooking using large datasets like Time Use Survey (TUS) 2019 and National Family Health Survey (NFHS) 2019.
- Conducting analysis across treated and control districts.
- Applied three econometric models: two linear regression models and one propensity score matching model.
- Findings indicate reductions in cooking time for women in treated districts.
- Authored a working paper detailing the study.

Documenting Key Stylized Facts on the Productivity of Indian Firms

Under the guidance of Professor Anuradha Saha (Associate Professor of Economics, Ashoka University)

- Conducting a comprehensive literature review to identify key trends in the productivity of Indian firms.
- Analyzing firm-level data from ASI (Annual Survey of Industries) and Prowess datasets.
- Investigating the factors influencing firm productivity across various sectors in India.

Exploring the Impact of District-Level Crime Rates on Women's Mobility

Under the guidance of Professor Bharat Ramaswami, (Professor of Economics, Ashoka University)

- Investigating how district-level crime rates restrict women's outdoor mobility.
- Developed a theoretical model to analyze women's time allocation as a constrained optimization problem.
- Empirically testing four hypotheses related to crime, socio-economic factors, and urban-rural differences in outdoor time using Time Use Survey, NFHS and NCRB crime data.
- Preliminary findings suggest that crime negatively affects women's outdoor time, with significant variability across districts, highlighting the role of local factors in influencing mobility.
